- 2003: Foreign Religious and Charitable Workers: CCCC;
- 2005: Canadian Immigration Law for Foreign Students, Regent College;
- 2005: Canadian Immigration for Africans: Redeemed Christian Church of God.

Jeffrey also assists Canadian and multinational companies and charitable organizations to bring in foreign workers to Canada. Using tools such as NAFTA, GATS, Provincial Nominee Programs and the Immigration Regulations, Jeffrey uses “out of the box” thinking to seek creative solutions to overcome obstacles, and help clients bring in mission critical foreign workers on time.

Jeffrey has also acted for churches, parachurch organizations, and seminaries to bring in foreign clergy, executives, and other religious workers to Canada from many different countries. He has published several articles on Religious Worker immigration issues for the Canadian Council of Christian Charities, and has spoken at their Annual Conference.

Rated “BV” by www.Martindale.com (very high ethical standards, and high to very high legal abilities), Jeffrey regularly advises lawyers across Canada on immigration issues, and receives referrals from lawyers across Canada and around the world. He is considered an innovator in the convergence of technology, business, and the law, and has been the founder of several legal service firms, including a Personal Injury Helpline, Lawyers-BC.com, and others.

Jeffrey is also a director of several Christian organizations, including the International Christian Chamber of Commerce (Canada), Asian Outreach International (Canada), the B.C. Christian News, and CanadianChristianity.com.
